

Project Description

Located along Çuğra Beach in Erdek, the Living Village project explores the relationship between collective living, the coastal landscape and the existing urban context. The design process began with an analysis of the site's connection to Erdek city center, the coastline and Seyitgazi Hill, together with studies of land use, transportation, urban density and surrounding spatial patterns. These observations formed the basis for developing the project's spatial organization and its relationship with the landscape.
The proposal aims to create a living environment where residential spaces are integrated with shared and social areas rather than functioning as isolated units. Open and semi-open spaces, terraces and transitional areas establish different levels of privacy while strengthening interaction between users and the surrounding landscape. The project was developed through analytical studies, hand sketches and successive design iterations, which gradually defined the relationship between built form, circulation and open space.
